Anna Urszula Kordas, The Baths at Kom el-Dikka in Alexandria as a Foundation of Constantine the Great? Reconsidering the Inscribed Mark ΦΛ ANT.

JRA 34 (2021) pp. 237-252, figg.

Reconsiders the inscribed marks on reused Ionic capitals found within the area of the baths at Kom el-Dikka in Alexandria. The marks ΦΛ ANT [S.E.G. XL, 1553] are reconstructed as the name of a prefect of Egypt, Flavius Antonius Theodorus (337 and 338 CE). This connection, as well as reconsideration of the archaeological evidence, provides precise clues to the dating of the baths' foundation. - Introduction. - Archaeological evidence of the baths. - Identification of ΦΛ ANT. - Other examples of similar marks. - The prefect of Egypt and the construction of public buildings. - Contribution to the dating of the baths building.
