

Marzia D'Angelo, An Ongoing Supplement to Traditional Dictionaries: WiP - Words in Progress and the Contribution of Greek Documentary Papyrology.

Trends in Classics 15 (2023) pp. 190-198.

Greek lexicography is in a state of constant evolution thanks to progress in philological studies and, in a special way, to the contribution offered by papyri, which frequently provides us with new words or new meanings of already known words. In this regard, the online, freely consultable database WiP - Words in Progress. Supplementary Lexicon of Ancient Greek aims to collect new or rare words and detail corrections and additions in order to record recent progress in the updating and expansion of Ancient and Byzantine Greek. Describes how the database works, and what advantages it offers compared to traditional dictionaries, with a particular focus on the contribution that Greek documentary papyri offer to Greek lexicography.
